After Last Wednesday's Lunch Club....

After a delicious lunch last Wednesday, I decided to join a few regulars for an après lunch, coffee & chat, which I thoroughly enjoyed.

During a lull in the conversation I said to my colleagues:

"Well! who was preaching at the Church Service today?"

Someone replied, nodding with approval, "Oh! It was the Reverend Snodgrass this week" and so I continued:

"Was it good?"

Well, all of the participants agreed that it was, nodding with approval and smiling like "Spitting Image" characters.

I then asked Lady Done-a Bunk : "What was the Reverend talking about that was so good?"

She replied, with bright alertness, "Do you know, I can't remember".

She turned to Lady de Lamb and asked: "What was he talking about. Can you remember dear?"

Turning to her friend, she replied with confidence:

"You know, I couldn't hear very well" to which Lady Fortesque, to my right and wielding a polished, rosewood shooting stick, retorted: "Neither could I hear, I believe that they are going to do something about it!"

I smiled and turned to Lord Poncenby-Gore and said: "My Lord, can you remember what the Reverend said?"

He smiled and jovially replied: "Well! I couldn't see the sheet and I lost my way." Finally, I turned to Michael: "What about you" and as quick as a flash, he replied:

"I didn't go to the Service, as I usually play the Organ at another Church."

We all laughed heartily; it was good, as I reminded them that not one person could remember anything about the Service and I suggested that we would have to encourage the Reverend to offer 'Handouts' to help, in future.

Lady Done-a-Bunk cleverly summed up our Coffee Session by saying: "I am pleased that God has a sense of humour."

We continued laughing and the characters all continued nodding in agreement.

You too, can meet the Characters, for I know that they will all be there next week for the next enthralling episode of "God works in mysterious ways":
