

The first Evening Organ Concert will be given by Anne Marsden Thomas on Saturday, 12 June at 7.30pm.

Anne is Director of Music at St. Giles Cripplegate Church, opposite the Barbican Centre, London. Her concert and teaching work has taken her to the USA, Japan, Europe and all over the UK, and she has made several commercial recordings.

In 1992 she founded and continues to direct the highly successful St. Giles International Organ School whose headquarters are at St. Giles Church. She also directs the Royal School of Church Music's annual residential Summer Course for Organists at St. Giles International Organ School.

Anne has written/edited a wide range of books for student organists, all of which are in print, and she expects to publish three more volumes this year through Cramer Music Ltd.

Anne Marsden Thomas studied at The Royal Academy of Music and afterwards with Dame Gillian Weir. As well as her concert, teaching, church and writing work she is in demand as an examiner, adjudicator and masterclass teacher, and she is a Council member of The Royal College of Organists.

Her programme includes music by Mendelssohn, Leighton, Howells and Judith Weir. Tickets £7.00 (£5.00 students) are available from the Parish Administrator, or at the door.

The next Tuesday Lunchtime Concert will be at 1pm. on 22 June, given by Tom Bell, winner of the 2004 Organ Recital Prize of the Royal Northern College of Music.
